Kling, Henri Adrien

DOB: February 14, 1842 (Paris, France)
DOD: May 2, 1918 (Geneva, Switzerland)

Henri Adrien Louis Kling was born in Paris, France, on February 14, 1842, and by the time he was ten he had decided to make music his life’s work. He first studied French horn and later played the violin, piano, and organ. At the age of 20, he was appointed solo horn player with the Geneva (Switzerland) Opera and the Pepin Orchestra. In 1865, he published his Horn School, which for many years was one of the best and most widely used manuals for that instrument.

For many years, Kling was bandmaster of the Landwehr Military Band and conducted the Kursaal Orchestra of Geneva, as well as the orchestra in Evan-les-Bains. He also was assistant conductor of the Municipal Orchestra of Geneva with Hugo de Senger. Kling was an organist in Cologne, France, for 37 years. In 1897, he became a professor of music at the Municipal Girl's School in Geneva.

In France, Kling was well known as an adjudicator at military and brass band contests. He died on May 2, 1918, in Geneva. His works include four operas, one symphony, four overtures, and numerous shorter works for band and orchestra that were very popular both in England and the United States. He is best known in the United States is his piccolo-tuba duet, The Elephant and the Fly.¹
